2. ICEES

organized by

NAVRACHANA UNIVERSITY

Scope and Importance

The goal of environmental sustainability is to conserve natural resources and to develop alternate sources if possible while, attempting at the same time to contain pollution and harm to the environment. Containing environmental pollution, conserving the environment and biodiversity, and minimizing the impact of anthropogenic activities, constitute the major focus of attention of the whole world. This would involve environmental chemistry, soil science, ecology, green cover, marine and freshwater systems, as well as environmental remediation, preservation, and agricultural practices and land use. Environmental Sustainability makes it imperative to look for alternative cleaner technologies that help reduce the hazardous environmental implications of traditional technologies. Environmental sustainability would also involve evaluating alternative energy systems, pollution control and mitigation, natural resource management, and the overall effects of human activity on natural systems of the earth.

Aim of the Conference

This conference aims to discuss and debate on the probable solutions to environmental problems, natural resource management, pollution control and mitigation, and also evaluate the impact of aquatic pollution on fauna and flora and human health and epidemiology. The conference also aims to address the bioethical, socio-economic and regulatory aspects of environmental sustainability and the role of biotechnologists & environmental Scientists in environmental protection.
